SENATOR DANIEL'S SPEECH.

Senator Daniel opened that famous sneech on silver in the Senate on September 14th, which has given such unbounded satisfaction to the Virginia Populists, as follows:

"Yet. Mr. President, we may indulge in some degree the comforting thought that the acute stage of the panic is now over. business is already in a state of conva-'It appears from the Bankers' Magazine of September, 1883, which is fresh from New York, that the tide of gold has so strongly set in from abroad to this country that it is coming back faster and in larger quantities than it had gone out, and that by the last of August all but 125,000,000 of the $63,000,000 exported between January and July had all been remported, with more on the way from

Doubtless some who look only on the surface of things will attribute this movment to the anticipated repeal of the Sherman law, but unfortunately for the cause of truth it is the acknowledged fact, as stated in the Magazine, which i cite as my authority, that the distinct causes of the return of gold are well

"First. In the sharp decline in our imports of goods after the panic broke out and the cancellation of further orders. "Second In the vast exportation of wheat, flour, feed and fodder crops, including corn, oats, barley, hay, mill-feed and bran, which have been taken by the United Kingdom and the continent in quantities bith-rto unknown, until nearly all of the freight room for two or three months ahead has been engaged. "Third. Added to this, during the east month the corner in provisions in Car-cago collapsed, and our hog products are now being exported in double the volume of any preceding month during the year. "And well does this financial periodical say that it was those three causes that dealy and in such volume, as it was the opposite condition preventing exports of these three staples for months before that sent gold out of the country instead to such an unprecedented extent.

The senator's speech is builded upon this coleur de rose state that has suddenly come to the country. Destroy this foundation upon which the speech is built, and the whole structure falls to the ground.

From what condition, in what part of the United States, did Senator Daniel draw his conclusion that "the acute stage of the panic is now over," and that "business is already in a state of con-Valescence ?"

If he will come to Richmond he will find that pretty much all the manufactories here are closing up and discharging their hands. They are working up old orders, but are receiving scarcely any ing the approaching winter. Go where he will to borrow money on the best collaterals, and, if he gets it at all, it will be as a special favor from friendly bank officers at very heavy interest. Let him look at the bank clearances for the week ending September 16th, 1893 (Financial Chronicle, page 439), and he will find that they were $767,882,123 against $1,176, 526,599 for the corresponding week one year ago. Dun's agency states the failures in the United States last week at 219 against 188 for the corresponding week of last year. How the senator can find in these facts evidence that we are in a state of convalescence passes our comprehension.

And how he can get any comfort from the state of our gold and general merchandise account is incomprehensible to us. In the six years ending June 30th, 1893, we had sent out of this country through the custom house 184 millions of dollars of gold coin more than we brought in, although the balance of trade in the same period was 262 millions of dollars in our favor (see detalled statement in Times of August 3d), so that on July 1st we had lost 446 millions of dollars of gold which, by every principle of reasoning, should have been here, but was sent to Europe, or remained there to pay for our securities, which the threat to pay them in depreciated silver dollers frightened Europeans into selling to us.

And even if, at the end of August, we had got back as much gold as we had exported after last January, how insignificant that would have been compared to the immense sum we have been steadily losing in the past six years. But let us see how that stands. We made a net export of gold, over what we imported, for the year ending June 30th, 1893, of $87. 505,463. Since the tide set our way in June we have imported about $40,000,000, and gold importations have ceased. What is there to congratulate ourselves on in this?

But, if Senator Daniel will inquire, he will hear it said on all hands in New York that the gold that has come here since June is nearly all borrowed gold or gold purchased by the banks at a heavy premium, and that the borrowers are at this moment in the greatest terror lest the delay in passing the repeal bill through the Senate will cause the European lenders to require it to be returned. And we cannot understand how it can be anything except borrowed or bought gold. Certainly the state of trade has not justifled any of it being sent here to pay for anything we have sent abroad. The Treasury Department has published the state of our foreign trade from January 1, 1893, to July 31, 1893. The document is No. 1, series 1893-'94. The value of our imports in those seven months was $520,-385,032, and the value of our exports in the same time was $445,931,602. On August 1st we were therefore $74,453,430 to the bad, to say nothing of the great sum of gold we exported during the same months, and we can't see how any but borrowed gold, er gold bought by the New York banks at a heavy premium, could come to us as matters stood on August 1st. We are without full returns for the month of August but the Financial Chronicle for September 16th gives on page 452 the exports and imports for the port of New York for that month, and we know that reports from other ports will not substantially vary the proportions. New York's imports for August amounted to $36,495,263 and her ex-

The Treasury document quoted gives the whole imports for July, 1833, for the whole country as $63,187,524, and the exports for the same month as $67,105,054, an excess of exports amounting to $3,917,530. New York does about three fifths of our foreign trade, so that it would be safe to put the exports and imports in the whole country for August as about balancing each other. Our excess of exports over imports for July and August, then, were less than four millions of dollars. How did any gold come to us from this with the rest of the account standing as it did? And where was that sharp decline in ports to $35,045,499. By what process did we get any gold out of this?

our imports when, for the seven months ending July 31st, 1893, they exceeded our exports $74,453,450; when they exceeded our imports in the same seven months of last year $22,987,470, and, for the month of July they were $63,187,524, as against $65,670,021 for the month of July, 1892 (for all which see Treasury document already quoted), and about balanced for August? And what about that immense increase in our export of farm products? The same document shows that our exports of agricultural products for the month of July, 1892, amounted to $41,478,603, while they amounted in July, 1893, to only $46,161,572. There is no very wonderful increase here.

We say, then, in concluding for the present, that when the Bankers' Magazine and Scrator Daniel attribute the spasmodic importation of gold in July and August to a beneficial state of trade, they absolutely ignore the plain and elementary facts of the case. Our foreign trade did not justify the importation of the gold that came, and there will inevitably be another outflow of it forthwith unless the Senate passes the repeal bill, and re-establishes our credit abroad.

It seems to us, then, that the basis upon which the Senator built his speech dissolves into thin air when it is criti cally examined.

-THE MAYOR AND MILITARY WERE

RIGHT. We have no patience whatever with some of the views we hear expressed respecting the conduct of the officers of the law and the military at Roanoke. A letter from Weldon, N. C. in yesterday's Dispatch, for instance, says;

The citizens here openly denounce the action of the officers and militia of Roamob of citizens engaged in an attack upor the jail. The best and most law-abiling people here look upon the affair as a reckless sacrifice of life. The criminal should have been protected so long as the officers could safely do so, but why shoot down good men for the sake of such a miserable wretch? The man had brought the indigration of the people down upon him by his own flendish act, and, as the Dispatch has so often said, when the negro men quit their devilish assaults upon the white women of the South then lynch law will be stopped.

Did any one ever meet with more atro cious and absurd nonsense than this? "The criminal should have been protected as long as the officers could safely do so," but he should have been surrendered to a new ones, and they are hopeless for the future. He will find the city full of unsuppleted men begging for work, and threatened with starvation and cold durbance of the fine description of quarters in the mew city hall for the outdoor poor.

Alderman Bowden is still confined to his room by sickness.

Councilman W. J. McDowell has just returned rom a trip to St. Louis and the World's Fair.

law would amount to something substantial under it, would it not?

"But why," says this sapient scribe, shoot down good men for the sake of such a miserable wretch?" Because good men are no longer good when they undertake to overawe officers of the law in the discharge of their duty and in upholding and enforcing the law, and all who attempt such a part should be shot down if nothing else will suffice for enforcing obedience to the law, whether they are good men or whether they are bad men. The law must be respected and obeyed if the life of every solitary man who opposes it is sacrificed in compelling submission to it.

And our scribe's doctrine is a pretty one, that the negro should have been surrendered to the mob because he "had brought the indignation of the people down upon him by his own flendish act." That is, whoever is accused of a "fiendish act" must be surrendered to an infuriated and senseless mob to have his life taken from him, whether he is guilty of the charges or whether he is not. It is the accusation and the "indignation of the people" which must cause him to forfeit his life, and not his guilt or innocence of the charge.

There is a lot of gush about this business only a little more objectionable to us than the Dispatch's left handed defence of the officers of the law in its yesterday's issue. We want no "audi alteram partem;" we are prepared to give judgment at once, and that judgment is that the mayor and military of Roanoke were perfectly justified in firing on the mob that attacked the jail and that the only thing to be regretted is that they were not strong enough to keep up their fire until every lawbreaker had been shot down or compelled to desist from his lawless course of procedure.

The distressing feature of the affair was that innocent lookers-on should have suffered with the guilty Assallants. But this is one of the inevitable and natural fruits of mob law-there is no discrimination between gullt and innocence. The friends of those innocent dead should cry for their blood at the hands of the leaders and followers in the mob who attacked the mayor and his posse.

Brussels beauty in Ingrain wideness and at Ingrain price. That's the message from the CARPET department.

Twenty styles are seeable---exact copies of Brussels and Moquette designs, woven of pure wool into Agra Ingrain --- and like all the Agra one side is almost as pretty as the other; 75 and 85c a yard---and we make and lay it on your floor over heavy padded lining.

We have hall and stair carpeting in these Brussels designs, too.

It takes months of planning and watching to gather such a carpet stock as greets you here, and our care for your interests extends as fully to the organization that manages the goods after they reach us. You buy a carpet in the morning and the case is exceptional if we can't have it made and laid on your floor by nightfall, if your needs demand it.

And the carpet's right that comes from us; the best of its class, be it a 20c ingrain or a $1.50 Axminister. New Smyrna Rugs came Saturday, I to 5 yards long.
